John M. Botts vs. John Tyler. Treachery Unmasked.

Mr. Botts, having been charged with falsehood *By Authority ' in the Madisonian, in reference treachery of John Tyler, appears at length in the Richmond Whig of the 10th in reply, traversing the whole matter in difference, and closing his statement with an affidavit of its correctness. We extract the following passages:

Tyler and myself slept in the same bed, and talked more than half the night on various subjects, public and private-among those subjects of else." a public nature was the establishment of a Na. apprehend that there would be a tie in the Senate tended it, until in a more serious tone he resumed : on that question, which we both deprecated : But said I, "Tyler, it will afford you a glorious oppor-To which he replied, "That it was a responsibility he did not covet-that he would rather avoid it; but if it did come to that, they should find that he was capable, as a national representative,

On the next morning, a number of gentlemen called and some of them introduced the subject of a Bank, as I supposed, with a view of ascerif he should have to decide the question as the presiding officer of the Senate-and I remarked to them: "You need not indulge any fears on that subject; Tyler will do what is right; he'll Botts," "Why," said I "I can't commit you any farther than you have already committed yourself fifty times over."

"Well, gentlemen," said Mr. Tyler, "I'll tell entertained or expressed while a Representative of and will not allow old opinions to have any influpresent (who believed Mr. Tyler trustworthy) that left the room with a doubt that he would vote for the bill if he had to vote at all.

Again: Early in the Extra Session which followed, Mr. Botts called on Mr. Tyler at the conversation took place :

After getting through the business which carried me there, Mr. Tyler said : "Well, Botts, I understand you have been denouncing my message;" to which I replied, made. I'll tell you candidly what I did say of the message, when asked my opinion of it : I said it was a slip-slep, milk-and-water affair, and not such as I had expected or desired to see."

Mr. Tyler said with some animation, but goodhumoredly, "Well, [an oath] what did you ex-

"Well, sir," said I, "I would have you to have recommended a Bank of the United States, flat-footed, and in the most unqualified terms." "Now," [another oath] said Mr. Tyler, "that shows how damned hard you are to please. I have submitted to your consideration three plans: system, and the Sub-Treasury; and have told

"But," said I, "Mr. Tyler, did n't you know that a Whig Congress would take neither the State Bank system nor the Sub-Treasury ? " "Certainly I did," said he, "and therefore you ought to be satisfied." that you should have recommended a Bank of the U. S. outright, and let Congress have come to your aid, and stood shoulder to shoulder upon the question instead of saying that each had been escaped the taunt we now meet with from our opponents-that we have a Whig President who dare not recommend a Bank." "But," I continued, "there was another objection I had to your message; I would have had you to recommend the distribution of the sales of the public lands, without qualification."

"And so I have," said he. "Oh no," I said, "you have attached a proviso, that the duties to be levied should n't exceed those contemplated by the act of 1833, which you know they are obliged to do, in order to raise enough revenue for the support of Government."

"There it is again," said he, "why, [another outh.] sir, you do n't understand the Compromise Act," and stepping off to his table, he brought the volume of laws containing the Compromise Act, and read from it the passage which declares that nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to prevent the passage of any act prior to the 30th day of June, 1842, in the contingency either of excess or deficiency of revenue, altering the rates of duties, &c .- so as to adjust the revenue to suit either contingency.

"New," said he, "sir, has'nt the contingency arisen? is there not a deficiency in the revenue and what is there in this act to prevent you from raising the duties to 20, 30, 40, 50, or 100 per cent. if it shall be necessary " without violating its provisions ?" "Well, said 1, Mr. Tyler, if this be your construction of this act, why did you say any thing about the duties contemplated by it, in connection with the subject of Distribution.' "Oh," said he, " you know what a certain portion of the country think of the Compromise act, and it is well enough to humor them." And for this it was that I denounced his pharissical and hypocritical cant about the Compromise act when he vetoed the Tariff Bill because it violated, as he said, its provisions, and therefore required us to give up the Distribution clause. At this point there was a slight pause in the con. versation, when I said, "Tyler, there is one piece of advice I want to give you, and as you have invited me to talk freely with you, I shall do so .-You are a poor man, and will feel it more sensibly when you retire from your present situation, than you have ever done before-you will find it necessary to live and entertain in a style different from what you have been accustomed to, and unless you provide the means now, you will be placed in an embarrassing situation. You ought to lay up from your salary $15,000 a year, which, in four years, will give you $60,000, and that, in Williamsburg, will be a fine estate, Note: The language of his Message is—" To you, then, who have come more directly from the body of our common constituents, I submit the entire question, as best qualified to give full exposition of their wishes and opinious."

ANOTHER VETERAN GONE .- Old William Polke, of Fort Wayne, Indiana, is gathered to his fathers! He was one of the framers of our State Constitution, and among the gallant soldiers who rallied under the flag of Harrison, who was a witness of his General's courage, of his persecutions and his triumph. When we saw him last, he was on his final march to the Tippecanoe battle-ground, in honor of his old Commander. It was he who, on that ground, unfurled and presented to the Whigs of New-York, through Mr. Brooks of the Express, the bullet-rent flag of Spencer, with an instruction, when the battle of the People should be ended, and his old Chieftain be seated in glory in the White House, that that holy banner should be presented to him, and by him be deposited among the archives of the Nation, as a token of the love of his surviving Indiana comrades in arms. Judge Polke lived to witness the execution of his patriotic wish, and to shed a tear in memory of him for whom the wish was executed. He has gone now to the home of Washington and Harrison-the home where virtue meets not with censoriousness or calumny-where "the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest.".

The proprietors are duly receiving from the medical profession, ministers of the Gosyel, officers of justice, and numerous private crizeus, ample and willing testimony, both written and verbal, it' the stjerior value and efficacy of this preparation. To the poor it is firmiched gratuitously on sufficient proof being given of their worklands.

Still further proof of the superior faire and efficiency of Sands' Sarsaparilla:

New-York, April 29th, 1813.

Messrs, Sands: Gentlemen—Although it may be considered unnecessary for me to add another proof to the justify deserved celebraty of your invaluable preparation of Sarsaparilla, yet for the benefit of my fellow men, I feel bound to prociaim the fact; From being a most helpless cripple, with a disease of the lower extremities, which spread over the leafs, instep, and feet, distressing me so much, as to render life almost miserable. I am now quite recovered and entirely by the use of your Sarsaparilla. For two years I was anable to wear a shee, and the right foot and anche were very much swollen—which at times discharged water and puts it endy, accompanied with violent itching—and burning sensotions, so as to denote on all rest. I gave up in desperir, and suppose
